Clinical Details:

Thank you for seeing Mr John Smith, a 52-year-old male office worker, for advice and management, regarding intermittent centrally located sharp 6/10 chest pain on exertion, relieved by rest, for which he has presented once to the Lyell McEwin Hospital Emergency Department. These episodes usually last a few minutes, without radiation.

John has a calculated absolute cardiovascular risk score of 12% 5 years, without any ECG changes. He is non-diabetic, with a total cholesterol of 6.8, HDL cholesterol 1.0 and an LDL cholesterol 2.8 - see attached blood testing and ECG tracing for your review.

He has had no previous Cardiac investigations.

Observations/Examination:

- No stigmata of cardiovascular disease
- JVPNE
- HSDNM
- BP 158/85; P 78 + regular.

I have advised him on diet and lifestyle, and commenced secondary prevention medical treatment, under suspicion of angina. This includes Aspirin, ACEI, lipid lowering therapy and B-blocker, with as required use of GTN spray (educated and trained on use). I have also advised him to contact SAAS should he experience any further chest pain.
